

Military Review

The Professional Journal of the U.S. Army

Mission and Vision

Mission

Since 1922, Military Review has provided a forum for the open exchange of ideas on military affairs. Subsequently, publications have proliferated throughout the Army education system that specialize either in tactical issues associated with particular Branches or on strategic issues at the Senior Service School level. Bridging these two levels of intellectual inquiry, Military Review focuses on research and analysis of the concepts, doctrine and principles of warfighting between the tactical and operational levels of war.

Military Review is a refereed journal that provides a forum for original thought and debate on the art and science of land warfare and other issues of current interest to the US Army and the Department of Defense. Military Review also supports the education, training, doctrine development and integration missions of the Combined Arms Center (CAC), Fort Leavenworth, Kansas. Military Review is printed bimonthly in English, Spanish and Portuguese and is distributed to readers in more than 100 countries. It is also printed in Arabic on a quarterly basis. Widely quoted and reprinted throughout the world, it is a readily available reference at most military and civilian university libraries and research agencies.

Military Review is featured on the following websites:

Combined Arms Center

Command and General Staff College

U.S. Army homepage with other Professional Army Journals.

Vision

- Stimulate officers to read, think critically, and communicate their ideas
- Not only to inform, but challenge
- Provide "fertile soil" in which new ideas and concepts can germinate
- Examine history, not only for its own sake, but to gain insight into the Army's future
- Deal with controversial subjects without being sensational
- Keep institutional biases in check